

PLASTERED PUPILS: Restoration of decorative plaster ceilings and cornices at Queen's Gate School in west London is part of the conversion of a former hostel into a new satellite site for the school. The £1.5 million project to provide additional teaching space is being undertaken by Killby & Gayford and is due for completion early this year. Structural engineer on the job is Price & Myers, with Wilson & Partners acting as mechanical engineer.